The resurrection of Jesus Christ represents the corner stone of the Christian faith. If Jesus did not resurrect, then He was simply a man. Although a significant prophet, a miracle worker, a healer, a great teacher, a compassionate person, a defender of the downtrodden, a moral individual, and one unjustly crucified; nevertheless, He died like any other man. However, the resurrection puts the final stamp of approval on Jesus’ life and ministry as being born of a virgin, a fulfiller of messianic prophecy, a sinless sacrifice, and the son of God. The resurrection authenticates His claims that “I and my father are one” (John 10:30) and “I came down from heaven, not to do mine own will, but the will of him that sent me” (John 6:38). Christ’s resurrection validates the Apostle John’s statement, “These are written, that ye might believe that Jesus is the Christ, the Son of God; and that believing ye might have life through his name” (John 20:31). As Christians we must defend the biblical account of the resurrection against those who deny it as historical fact.

According to critics of Jesus’ resurrection, the different Gospel accounts contain contradictions and errors. One skeptic says, “The Gospel accounts of the risen Jesus are discordant and contradictory,” while another states, “When we examine the resurrection narratives, it is obvious that they cannot be reconciled.” Michael L. Martin, philosophy professor and atheist says, “In sum, the accounts of what happened at the tomb are either inconsistent or can only be made consistent with the aid of implausible interpretations.” Thomas Sheehan, professor of religious studies and a disbeliever in the resurrection says, “The differing narratives of Easter in the later Gospels cannot be harmonized to produce a consistent story, without doing violence to the accounts both individually and as an ensemble. The various Easter narratives contradict one another egregiously.” Dan Barker, preacher turned atheist and co-president of Freedom from Religion says, “The story of the resurrection of Jesus, told by at least five different writers, is hopelessly irreconcilable.” Barker challenges believers to provide a simple non-contradictory chronological narrative of the resurrection and ascension without omitting a single biblical detail.

In responding to critics of the resurrection, we should realize that a satisfactory answer is most likely unachievable. When the Gospels agree perfectly, skeptics accuse the writers of conspiring and simply copying one another. When the Gospels differ, they are contradictory, spurious, and wrong. Regardless of the approach taken, apologists of Jesus’ resurrection will be viewed as wrong.

However, some criticism is justified since popular Christian writers have not fully integrated the four Gospel accounts of Christ’ resurrection. Josh McDowell in Evidence That Demands a Verdict and More Than a Carpenter presents a convincing apologetic in support of the resurrection, but does not give a timeline of events using all relevant verses. Lee Strobel in The Case for Christ defends the resurrection, but does not explain all pertinent verses in a chronological order. Both A. T. Robertson in A Harmony of the Gospels and Craig Blomberg in Jesus and the Gospels do not give a full harmony of the resurrection accounts found in Matthew, Mark, Luke, and John. Gary Habermas and Michael Licona in The Case for the Resurrection of Jesus acknowledge the problem, but offer no solution. John Wenham in Easter Enigma gives a brief harmony of the resurrection, but leaves several issues unresolved. Likewise, articles found on several apologetic Internet sites fall short of explaining all verses in a simple timeline.

An explanation developed by Harvard Law Professor Simon Greenleaf in The Testimony of the Evangelists Examined by the Rules of Evidence Administered in Courts of Justice published in 1874 helps illustrate some of the problems in harmonizing the Gospel accounts of the resurrection. Greenleaf’s harmony has the resurrected Jesus appearing to the women who went to the tomb (Matthew 28:8-10) before appearing to Mary Magdalene. However, Mark 16:9 makes it abundantly clear that Jesus appeared first to Mary Magdalene. One of the crucial elements in harmonizing events of the resurrection is separating Mary Magdalene from the other women at the tomb, having Jesus appear to Mary and then the other women, and then rejoining the women as they leave the garden to tell the apostles about seeing Jesus.

Greenleaf has Peter making one visit to the tomb; however, the most plausible explanation is that Peter made two visits. In the first visit (John 20:2-5), Peter and John go to the tomb when summoned by Mary Magdalene. In the second visit (Luke 24:10-12), Peter goes to the tomb alone when told by Mary Magdalene, Joanna, Mary the mother of James, and the other women about seeing the resurrected Jesus. The second visit gives a plausible time for Jesus to reveal himself to Simon Peter, apart from the other apostles, as mentioned in Luke 24:34 and 1 Corinthians 15:5.

The four Gospel accounts of events on the day of Jesus’ resurrection can be harmonized in a coherent timeline; however, several issues make this task less than easy. Matthew and John were apostles (among the chosen twelve) while Mark was probably a young disciple. All three were intimately familiar with Jesus’ betrayal, crucifixion, and resurrection. John is specifically mentioned as being at Christ’s crucifixion. Matthew, Mark, and John undoubtedly saw Jesus after his resurrection. However, all four writers of the Gospels, to one extent or another, rely on eyewitness testimonies of the resurrection which include the Peter, John (the other disciple whom Jesus loved), Mary Magdalene, Mary the mother of James, Salome, Joanna, at least one Roman soldier, and Cleopas. Additional possible sources include the other apostles, Mary the sister of Lazarus, Mary the wife of Cleopas, and Mary the mother of Jesus.

Keep in mind that witnesses of events on the day Jesus resurrected told what they remembered or felt was significant, and left out details they considered unimportant. For example, the account found in John 20:1-18 is clearly from the testimony and viewpoint of Mary Magdalene. Leaving out information in a historical account is not wrong; however, it does give an incomplete picture. Two or more differing accounts of an event, due to the omission of specific details, are not necessarily contradictory. For example, when identifying the women who went to the tomb John mentions Mary Magdalene, Matthew mentions Mary Magdalene and the other Mary, while Mark lists Mary Magdalene, Mary the mother of James, and Salome. None of the three accounts are wrong; however, none give a complete list of all the women who went to the tomb.

Timeline discontinuities are the most difficult problem to resolve when harmonizing events on the day Jesus resurrected as narrated in the four Gospels. Sometimes action occurs, time progresses, or the scene changes without being clarified in the narrative, an issue common throughout the four Gospels, but of critical importance in the resurrection story. For example, Matthew 28:4–5 represents a major timeline break where significant action occurs between the two verses. Matthew does not mention John’s account of Mary Magdalene running to get Peter and John, their race to the tomb, its subsequent examination, and their departure. Nor does he mention Mary looking into the tomb, seeing two angels, leaving the tomb entrance, and her subsequent encounter with the risen Christ. Mark 16:4–5 and Luke 24:3–4 are timeline breaks for the same information.

All four Gospels combined give the most complete resurrection story. The following twenty-two point harmony requires a minimum of conjecture and flows in a coherent timeline based upon: (1) Each Gospel account is told in a chronological order. (2) Information from one Gospel can be used to fill in omission points in another. (3) Each Gospel account is accurate in regard to the details mentioned. In the following harmonization, all verses are accounted for in Matthew 28:1–15, Mark 16:1–13, Luke 24:1–43, and John 20:1–25 that describe events on the day Jesus resurrected. The language of the New King James Version is used.

A Twenty-Two Point Harmony of Jesus’ Resurrection

1. The resurrection took place on the first day of the week following the Sabbath. The day of Christ’s resurrection is described in the four Gospels as:

   • Now after the Sabbath, as the first day of the week began to dawn. (Matthew 28:1)
   • Now when the Sabbath was past . . . on the first day of the week. (Mark 16:1–2)
2. The time of day when the women went to the tomb is described as:
   - Early, while it was still dark. (John 20:1)
   - Very early in the morning. (Luke 24:1)
   - Very early in the morning . . . when the sun had risen. (Mark 16:2)
   - As the first day of the week began to dawn. (Matthew 28:1)

   Putting these general descriptions together, we can say the women left their homes while it was dark; however, by the time they walked to the appointed meeting place, waited for everyone to assemble, traveled the remaining distance, and arrived at the tomb the sun had begun to show above the horizon. The time from dark to sunrise is around forty minutes depending on cloud cover and the phase of the moon. Some of the women may have walked the two mile distance from Bethany, which would have taken at least thirty minutes. We should keep in mind that any meeting time selected by the women was only approximate since accurate time was not kept in the typical household. Waiting for the group to assemble, including the inevitable straggler, could have easily consumed twenty minutes or more. The total time for the entire process probably exceeded one hour.

   The Greek word erchomai is typically translated “come, came or went” in the four Gospel accounts to describe the women “coming” to the tomb. Erchomai means “to come” or “to come from one place to another.” Coming to the tomb involved leaving home, assembling together, walking the required distance, and arriving at the tomb. The entire “coming” process began when it was dark and ended after sunrise.

3. A group of women walk to the tomb where Jesus is buried, having plans to anoint His body with spices. Individuals in the group are Mary Magdalene, Mary the mother of James and Joses, Salome, Joanna, and other women (Matthew 28:1, Mark 16:1, Luke 24:10, John 20:1). We can conclude the group was comprised of at least six women and probably more.

   Matthew 27:55‒56 and Luke 23:49 mention that a group of women followed Christ from Galilee and were witnesses of His crucifixion. Matthew 27:61 and Luke 23:55‒56 point out that the same group of women followed Jesus’ funeral procession and observed where He was buried. Some sat by His tomb. These women then prepared spices and fragrant oils to anoint His body as soon as the mandatory Sabbath rest was past. Six names associated with this group of Galilean women are mentioned in Matthew 27:56, Mark 16:1, Luke 24:10, and John 19:25. They include Mary the mother of Jesus, Mary Magdalene, Mary the mother of James and Joses, Mary the wife of Cleopas, Joanna, and Salome (wife of Zebedee and mother of James and John). Mary the sister of Lazarus may have also been in the group.

4. Sometime prior to the women arriving at the tomb, an earthquake occurs. An angel of the Lord descends from heaven and rolls away the large stone from the door. The angel sits on the stone to prevent it from being rolled back in place, dominating any course of action the soldiers might consider. The angel has a countenance like lightning and is clothed with raiment as white as snow. The angel’s appearance is so frightful that the guards shake and become unconscious (Matthew 28:2‒4).

5. As the women approach the tomb, they discuss among themselves who will roll the stone away from the tomb entrance (Mark 16:3).

6. When the women arrive at the tomb, the stone has been rolled away (Mark 16:4, Luke 24:2, John 20:1). The angel sitting on the stone has disappeared, the guards have regained consciousness and left, and the tomb site is deserted.

7. The women enter the tomb and see that Jesus’ body is missing (Luke 24:3).

8. Mary Magdalene leaves the other women at the tomb and runs to get Peter and John (the disciple whom Jesus loved). She tells them that Jesus’ body has been taken from the tomb (John 20:2). When harmonizing, keep in mind that John 20:2 and 20:18 confirm two separate events. In John 20:2, Mary Magdalene travels by herself to get Peter and John. This event should not be confused with John 20:18 when all the women return from the tomb to tell the apostles of their experiences.

9. Peter, John, and Mary Magdalene return to the tomb. John outruns Peter to reach the sepulcher first but remains outside. Peter arrives and immediately enters. They both verify that Jesus’ body is missing and see the linen clothes with the head covering lying by itself (John 20:3‒9). In harmonizing the resurrection accounts, it is important to realize that the visit to the tomb by Peter and John mentioned here is different from the visit by Peter alone, mentioned in Luke 24:12.

10. The disciples, Peter and John, leave the tomb and return to their homes (John 20:10). As typical men, they have completed their investigation, reached a conclusion, and see no need to linger. All the women remain behind at the tomb. Originally they had planned to anoint the body of Jesus with spices, a task requiring some time. Having no body to anoint, the grieving women stand outside the tomb and discuss the disappearance of Jesus’ body, being perplexed by its absence.

11. A weeping Mary Magdalene walks to the tomb entrance, stoops down, and looks inside. She sees two angels dressed in white, one at the head and one at the foot where Jesus’ body had lain. The angel asks “Woman, why are you weeping?” Mary replies, “Because they have taken away my Lord, and I do not know where they have laid him” (John 20:11‒13). The angels appear as men. At this point, Mary believes someone has stolen the body of Jesus.

12. Mary Magdalene turns and walks away from the tomb. In the distance, she sees a male figure walking in the garden. Desperate to find where Jesus’ body has been taken, she walks toward the unknown man, believing him to be the gardener, and perhaps responsible for the missing corpse. She separates herself from the other women, leaving them at the tomb. Jesus sees Mary in the distance coming in His direction, perhaps looking behind bushes for the missing body. He loudly calls out, “Woman, why are you weeping? Whom are you seeking?” Still not close enough to recognize Jesus, Mary calls in reply, “Sir, if you have carried him away, tell me where you have laid him.” After this short exchange, Mary resumes her search of the garden. As she draws closer, Jesus speaks her name in a normal tone of voice. At that point Mary recognizes Christ, turns directly toward Him and calls out, “Rabboni” (John 20:14‒17). Mary Magdalene was the first person to see Jesus following His resurrection (Mark 16:9), an important point in harmonizing the resurrection accounts. Three key arguments support this explanation.

- If Mary had been in close proximity to Jesus as she turned and walked away from the tomb, she would have been able to identify Him. This suggests He was some distance away.
- The tomb was located in a garden (John 19:41). Mary made a logical error when she mistook Jesus for the gardener.
- A person calling out in a loud voice is often not identifiable even when one is familiar with their normal speaking voice. Mary was not able to identify Jesus when He called loudly from a distance.

English translations do not do justice to the language used to describe Mary’s actions at the tomb in John 20:14. The NKJV says, “She turned around,” while the KJV is rendered, “She turned herself back.” We typically interpret this passage to mean that she turned her head around and saw Jesus. A literal translation from the Greek says, “She turned to the back.” The two Greek words eis and opiso used in this verse provide a key to its understanding. Eis and opiso are used together in Matthew 13:16, Luke 9:62, Luke 17:31, John 6:66, and John 18:6 to denote significant action in reversing ones course, either spiritually or physically. Based on the language, we can say that Mary “turned back” or “turned and walked away” from the tomb.

According to John 1:41, Jesus was buried near where He was crucified (Golgotha) in a tomb located within a garden. The Garden Tomb (also known as Gordon’s Calvary) is one site proposed as the burial place of Jesus. In 1883, General Charles G. Gordon found a rocky escarpment which from several angles resembled the face of a skull. Gordon concluded that the rocky escarpment was probably Golgotha where Jesus was crucified. Nearby were located a number of tombs, one of which was surrounded by a garden. This tomb, which has become known as the Garden Tomb, contains an ancient wine press and a large cistern where gardeners stored and drew water for their plants. While the Garden Tomb is probably not the burial place of Christ (the site of Church of the Holy Sepulcher is the most authentic location), it supports scripture by serving as a historical example of a tomb located within a garden.

When considering the surrounding garden, Mary’s logic in leaving the tomb to look for the body of Jesus is readily apparent. We can surmise that herbs, grapes, figs, and olives were some of the products grown in the garden. All of these provided cover where the corpse could have been hidden. Mary thought Jesus’ body had been stolen, and left the tomb to search among the surrounding vines, bushes, and trees.

13. As Mary Magdalene leaves the tomb to search the garden, two angels appear to the remaining women standing outside the tomb entrance. The women are frightened and bow their faces to the earth. The angels tell the women not to fear and announce that Jesus is risen (Matthew 28:5–7, Luke 24:4–8).

14. The women enter Jesus’ tomb and find a young man clothed in a long white robe sitting on the right side. He shows them where the body had lain and again announces that Jesus is resurrected (Mark 16:5–6). As pointed out by Matthew, the women enter the tomb at the angel’s invitation (Matthew 28:6). The young man is one of the two angels previously observed by Mary (John 20:12). According to the women’s testimony, the angels outside the tomb had a powerful angelic appearance while those inside appeared as normal men clothed in white.

15. Angels command the women to tell the disciples that Jesus is resurrected. The women exit the tomb in fear and great joy, and run to tell the disciples. (Matthew 28:7–8, Mark 16:7–8).

16. As the women leave the tomb they are hailed by Jesus, who has been talking with Mary Magdalene in the garden. The women bow down, hold His feet, and worship Him. Jesus instructs the women to tell His brethren they will see Him again (Matthew 28:9–10). To harmonize events at the tomb, Mary Magdalene must be separated from the other women. This permits Mary Magdalene to see Jesus first, followed by the other women.

17. Concurrent with the women leaving Jesus, some of the guards assigned to secure the tomb enter the city (Matthew 28:11–15). Since Pilate approved placing the guards at the tomb, they were no doubt Roman soldiers rather than Jewish temple police (Matthew 27:62–65). Reporting back to Pilate raised several difficulties. To admit incompetence by losing Jesus’ body, combined with an unbelievable story of a shining angel who rolled away the stone covering the tomb, was not a viable option. As Dr. Peter May says, “It could well have cost them their lives.” Seeking a more sympathetic ear, the soldiers go to the chief priests and tell of their terrifying experience. The chief priests consult with the elders and determine a course of action. They give the soldiers a large sum of money and promise to intervene with the governor if necessary to protect them. In turn the soldiers are instructed to say that Jesus’ body was stolen by His disciples at night while they slept.

18. Being afraid, the women do not speak to anyone on their return journey (Mark 16:8). Mary Magdalene, Mary the mother of James, Salome, Joanna, and other women in their group go straight to the apostles and tell of seeing angels and the risen Jesus (Mark 16:10, Luke 24:9–10, John 20:18). This is separate from the previous event described in John 20:2 when Mary Magdalene told Peter and John the tomb was empty.

19. The women’s words are as idle tales and not believed (Mark 16:11, Luke 24:11). After all, Peter and John had earlier witnessed the empty tomb—not angels and the risen Lord. Rejection of the women’s testimony makes sense when we realize that in first century Jewish culture women were considered inferior witnesses, not as dependable as men.

20. Peter, one of the apostles present, hears the women’s story. Characteristically an action driven person, he runs back to the tomb for a second look, this time without John. He reexamines the empty tomb and sees the linen clothes lying as originally observed (Luke 24:12). As Simon Peter leaves the tomb he encounters the risen Christ in the garden (Luke 24:34). In 1 Corinthians 15:5, the Apostle Paul says that Cephas (Peter) saw Jesus before the twelve. We can logically conclude that Peter saw the resurrected Jesus during his solo trip to the tomb.
21. Later in the day, Jesus appears to Cleopas and another disciple as they walk to Emmaus, located about seven miles from Jerusalem (Mark 16:12–13, Luke 24:13–32). The two disciples discuss the women’s report of an empty tomb, their encounter with angels, and verification of the empty tomb by Peter and John (Luke 24:23–24). However, the two disciples have no knowledge of Peter’s second trip to the tomb. The two return to Jerusalem and report to the eleven. During the discussion, they discover that Simon Peter saw Jesus following His resurrection (Luke 24:33–35).

22. The eleven apostles and other disciples (Luke 24:33) gather together in a locked room on the resurrection night in fear of the Jews. As Cleopas and the other disciple tell their story, Jesus appears and shows them His hands and feet and side. Jesus then asks for food and eats to verify that He is flesh and bones (Luke 24:36–43, John 20:19–25). Thomas is absent when Jesus appears, perhaps having temporarily stepped out (John 20:24).

End of the Resurrection Narratives

Matthew’s narrative of events on the resurrection day can be stopped at Matthew 28:15. As described in Matthew 28:16–17, the disciples later travel to a mountain in Galilee where they meet Jesus, an event geographically related to Christ’s appearance at the Sea of Galilee described in John 21:1–19. The Sea of Galilee appearance probably took place near Capernaum, the home of Peter, a straight line distance of 79 miles from Jerusalem.

Mark’s account of the resurrection day can be terminated at Mark 16:13. Christ’s appearance to the eleven in Mark 16:14 easily corresponds to John 20:26–29, eight days after His resurrection.

Luke’s description of the resurrection day can be halted at Luke 24:43. Verses that follow can be ascribed to events immediately prior to Christ’s ascension described in Acts 1:2–12, forty days after His resurrection.

The Apostle John clearly defines an end to the resurrection day events in John 20:25. After the first appearance, Jesus appears a second time eight days later in the same room, this time with Thomas present. In 1 Corinthians 15:5, the Apostle Paul describes the second appearance and lists “the twelve” being present. Presumably, a reference to the eleven apostles and Matthias, later selected to replace the fallen Judas.

Post Resurrection Appearances

Jesus made a number of appearances between His resurrection and ascension. According to Acts 1:3, Jesus remained on earth for forty days following His resurrection. The following is a list of ten occasions recorded in scripture where Jesus appeared. Some of the appearances described by Paul in 1 Corinthians 15:3-8 may be duplicate accounts.

• Jesus appears to Mary Magdalene, Mary the mother of James, Salome, Joanna, and other women near the tomb (Mark 16:1-2, Luke 24:10).

• On the road to Emmaus, Jesus walks with Cleopas and a friend on the afternoon of the resurrection day (Mark 16:12-13, Luke 24:13-32).

• Jesus appears to the ten disciples gathered together at night on the resurrection day. Thomas is absent (Luke 24:33-43, John 20:19-25).

• Jesus appears to the eleven disciples eight days after His resurrection (Mark 16:14, John 20:26-29).

• At the Sea of Galilee, Jesus talks and eats with seven of the disciples including James and John (the sons of Zebedee), Simon Peter, Thomas and Nathanael (John 21:1-19). This is the third appearance Jesus made to His disciples (those chosen as apostles) following the resurrection (John 21:15). This event probably took place near Capernaum, the home of Peter, located on the Sea of Galilee a straight line distance of 79 miles from Jerusalem.

• Jesus meets with the eleven disciples at a mountain location in Galilee (Matthew 28:16-17).
• Paul records that Jesus appeared to Cephas (Peter) and then to the twelve. Matthias was present to make twelve even though he was not yet formally selected to replace the fallen Judas (1 Corinthians 15:5, Acts 1:21-22).

• Paul said that Jesus appeared to a large crowd of over 500 brethren at one time (1 Corinthians 15:6).

• Paul affirms that Jesus appeared to James and then to all the apostles (1 Corinthians 15:7).

• Jesus speaks to the disciples before His ascension at the Mount of Olives near Bethany outside of Jerusalem (Luke 24:50-51, Acts 1:4-12).

Conclusion

One prevalent theme in the Gospel narratives is the initial skepticism of the witnesses about Christ’s resurrection. On the first day of the week, the women are perplexed when they find the stone rolled away and an empty tomb. There is no rush to conclude that Jesus is resurrected (Luke 24:4). When Peter and John see the empty tomb they do not connect it with Christ’s teaching about His resurrection (John 20:8–9). Rather than being resurrected, Mary Magdalene is convinced that someone has stolen the body of Jesus (John 20:13–15). The apostles do not believe the women’s testimony about seeing the risen Christ (Luke 24:11 and Mark 16:11). The two disciples traveling to Emmaus are sad because Jesus has been crucified, His body is missing, and their hope in Jesus as the redeemer of Israel is lost (Luke 24:17–24). When the two Emmaus disciples tell of seeing the risen Lord, they are not believed (Mark 16:12–13). When Jesus appears to the apostles on the resurrection night, they think He is a spirit rather than a flesh and bone physical body (Luke 24:37–43). Being absent at the time, Thomas rejects the testimony of the ten apostles and others present (John 20:24–25).

The clear testimony we have in the Gospels is that the witnesses were not gullible followers wanting to believe their teacher had come back to life. They were not zealots, bent on creating a resurrection myth. Most, if not all, of Christ’s disciples initially dismissed any thought of His resurrection and rejected claims to that effect; however, they were later convinced through personal contact He was alive. The apostles became changed men. Rather than being deniers and deserters as they were before the crucifixion, they now proclaimed Jesus as Messiah. Because of the resurrection, the apostles were so convinced of His message that most died for their beliefs. Their changed behavior is additional testimony to the truth of the resurrection.

The four Gospel accounts of the resurrection can be logically harmonized with very little conjecture. Within each Gospel, all resurrection events occur in a simple, coherent timeline. The integration of four different accounts, based on multiple eyewitnesses, by four different writers, without collusion or coaching, adds enormous credibility to the resurrection story. The combined Gospels are an accurate historical record of the resurrection of Jesus Christ.

4. And it happened, as they were greatly perplexed about this, that behold, two men stood by them in shining garments. 5. Then, as they were afraid and bowed their faces to the earth, they said to them, “Why do you seek the living among the dead? 6. He is not here, but is risen! Remember how He spoke to you when He was still in Galilee, 7. saying, ‘The Son of Man must be delivered into the hands of sinful men, and be crucified, and the third day rise again.’” 8. And they remembered His words. 7. But go, tell His disciples—and Peter—that He is going before you into Galilee; there you will see Him, as He said to you.” 8. So they went out quickly and fled from the tomb, for they trembled and from the tomb with fear and great joy, and ran to bring His disciples word. were amazed. And they said nothing to anyone, for they were afraid.

<td>11. Now while they were going, behold, some of the guard came into the city and reported to the chief priests all the things that had happened. 12. When they had assembled with the elders and consulted together, they gave a large sum of money to the soldiers, 13. saying, “Tell them, ‘His disciples came at night and stole Him away while we slept.’ 14. And if this comes to the governor’s ears, we will appease him and make you secure.” 15. So they took the money and did as they were instructed; and this saying is commonly reported among the Jews until this day.</td> marveling to himself at what had happened.

12. After that, He appeared in another form to two of them as they walked and went into the country.
13. And they went and told it to the rest, but they did not believe them either.

13. Now behold, two of them were traveling that same day to a village called Emmaus, which was seven miles from Jerusalem.
14. And they talked together of all these things which had happened.
15. So it was, while they conversed and reasoned, that Jesus Himself drew near and went with them.
16. But their eyes were restrained, so that they did not know Him.
17. And He said to them, “What kind of conversation is this that you have with one another as you walk and are sad?”
18. Then the one whose name was Cleopas answered and said to Him, “Are You the only stranger in Jerusalem, and have You not known the things which happened there in these days?”
19. And He said to them, “What things?” So they said to Him, “The things concerning Jesus of Nazareth, who was a Prophet mighty in deed and word before God and all the people,
20. and how the chief priests and our rulers delivered Him to be condemned to death, and crucified Him.
21. But we were hoping that it was He who was going to redeem Israel. Indeed, besides all this, today is the third day since these things happened.
22. Yes, and certain women of our company, who arrived at the tomb early, astonished us.
23. When they did not find His body, they came saying that they had also seen a vision of angels who said He was alive.
24. And certain of those who were with us went to the tomb and found it just as the women had said; but Him they did not see.”
25. Then He said to them, “O foolish ones, and slow of heart to believe in all that the prophets have spoken!
26. Ought not the Christ to have suffered these things and to enter into His glory?”
27. And beginning at Moses and all the Prophets, He expounded to them in all the Scriptures the things concerning Himself.
28. Then they drew near to the village where they were going, and He indicated that He would have gone farther.
29. But they constrained Him, saying, “Abide with us, for it is toward evening, and the day is far spent.” And He went in to stay with them.
30. Now it came to pass, as He sat at the table with them, that He took bread, blessed and broke it, and gave it to them.
31. Then their eyes were opened and they knew Him; and He vanished from their sight.
32. And they said to one another, “Did not our heart burn within us while He talked with us on the road, and while He opened the Scriptures to us?”
33. So they rose up that very hour and returned to Jerusalem, and found the eleven and those who were with them gathered together,
34. saying, “The Lord is risen indeed, and has appeared to Simon!”
35. And they told about the things that had happened on the road, and how He was known to them in the breaking of bread.

36. Now as they said these things, Jesus Himself stood in the midst of them, and said to them, “Peace to you.”
37. But they were terrified and frightened, and supposed they had seen a spirit.
38. And He said to them, “Why are you troubled? And why do doubts arise in your hearts?
39. Behold My hands and My feet, that it is I Myself. Handle Me and see, for a spirit does not have flesh and bones as you see I have.”
40. When He had said this, He showed them His hands and His feet.
41. But while they still did not believe for joy, and marveled, He said to them, “Have you any food here?”
42. So they gave Him a piece of a broiled fish and some honeycomb.
43. And He took it and ate in their presence.

evening, being the first day of the week, when the doors were shut where the disciples were assembled, for fear of the Jews, Jesus came and stood in the midst, and said to them, “Peace be with you.”
20. When He had said this, He showed them His hands and His side. Then the disciples were glad when they saw the Lord.
21. So Jesus said to them again, “Peace to you! As the Father has sent Me, I also send you.”
22. And when He had said this, He breathed on them, and said to them, “Receive the Holy Spirit.
23. If you forgive the sins of any, they are forgiven them; if you retain the sins of any, they are retained.”
24. Now Thomas, called the Twin, one of the twelve, was not with them when Jesus came.
25. The other disciples therefore said to him, “We have seen the Lord.” So he said to them, “Unless I see in His hands the print of the nails, and put my hand into His side, I will not believe.”
